The summit provides opportunities for:

- In-depth workshops and informative panels
- Outstanding networking with locals and national participants
- Learning and practicing new leadership skills
- Forging new relationships and renew well-established ones
- Expanding your circle of influence
- Insightful self-reflection
- Dialogue about innovative and challenging ideas
- Celebrating your accomplishments and those of others
- Honoring your mind, body, soul connection: taking mindful action
- Brainstorming ideas and discuss issue

Summit Chair - Linda Yamauchi, Manager Consumer Affairs, Southern California Edison, Retired

About the Center:

The Center is dedicated to fostering leadership for positive social change to ensure there are Asian American, Native Hawaiian and Pacific Islander (AANHPI) leaders ready to embrace the challenges. A primary goal of the Center is to develop ethical and compassionate women leaders, to sit at decision-making tables. Center programs develop leadership capacity by assisting AANHPI women to make contributions in their workplace, homes and communities.

The Center recognizes AANHPI women as a vital force in the nation and acknowledges that many AANHPI women hit the “bamboo ceiling.” Their numbers in senior management, corporate brands, academia, not-for-profit organizations or government have risen only slightly in the past decade. Thus, the Center is committed to redefining leadership to through the implementation of the Center’s Whole Person Leadership Model.
