

* SAVE THE DATE ****

UCLA's four Ethnic Studies research centers and the Institute of American Cultures invite you to the panel discussion

Beyond the Elections: Political Impacts on Communities of Color

Date: Thursday, October 27, 2016

Time: 5:30 p.m. - 8:00 p.m.

Location: 144 Haines Hall
(Chicano Studies Research Center Library)

What can we learn from this election season and how can we use this knowledge to advance racial and political equity? Featuring a panel of UCLA scholars and researchers, this critical discussion will address local, state, and national discourse and referenda and their impact on communities of color. In addition to candidates for elected office, several propositions will be on the November ballot that may significantly affect underprivileged populations, including the poor, immigrant, and those imprisoned for non-violent crimes.

A reception will follow the discussion.

Free to the public. Please RSVP to Eventbrite:

<http://UCLARaceandElectionsPanel.eventbrite.com>

Organized by the American Indian Research Center, the Asian American Research Center, and Bunche Center for African American Studies, and the Chicano Studies Research Center

Sponsored by the UCLA Institute of American Cultures

